Description

Almost all man pages are affected by the following problem (detected by Lintian):

    manpage-has-bad-whatis-entry
    Each manual page should start with a "NAME" section, which lists the name and a brief description of the page separated by "\-". The "NAME" section is parsed by lexgrog and used to generate a database that's queried by commands like apropos and whatis. This tag indicates that lexgrog was unable to parse the NAME section of this manual page.
    For manual pages that document multiple programs, functions, files, or other things, the part before "\-" should list each separated by a comma and a space. Each thing listed must not contain spaces; a man page for a two-part command like "fs listacl" must use something like "fs_listacl" in the "NAME" section so that it can be parsed by lexgrog.
    Refer to the lexgrog(1) manual page, the groff_man(7) manual page, and the groff_mdoc(7) manual page for details.

- Assignee set to Javi Fontan

- Target version set to Release 4.14

#3 - 08/17/2015 01:20 PM - Javi Fontan

I've uploaded a new version of 4.14 man pages to branch bug-3889 (https://github.com/OpenNebula/one/tree/bug-3889) and updated the scripts that generate man files.

#4 - 08/31/2015 02:09 PM - Javi Fontan

- Status changed from Pending to Closed

- Resolution set to fixed

Now the format seems to be OK. If any problem is found we can reopen the issue.

#5 - 08/31/2015 02:09 PM - Javi Fontan

New man pages merged to master.
